IF I COULD HAVE MY WAY .... BY MRS. VAL. ROBERTS.

If I could have my way, What customs I would break, What fashions old destroy, And nice new laws I'd make; Husbands should never fame, And wives should hold their sway What blessed times they'd be, If I could have my way.

If I could have my way, I'll tell you what I'd do: I'd have the single wed, And all the married true. No doubts should then exist, No husband dare say "Nay," What'er his wife would ask, If I could have my way.

I'd have a law enforced, That then no gentleman, Without a wife's consent, Should stay out after ten; No wife would venture then An angry word to say-For ladies all are pleased If they but have their way.

No matter high or low-They'd soon get married then, Were taxes levied so. Old ...nids I'd pension well; For this with truth I'll say, They would not single dwell, If they could have their way.

Old bachelors I'd tax-

But ah! 'tis vain to wish! So, since it cannot be. A word of good advice, Dear gents, pray take of me: If woman's smiles are dear, You've but kind things to say; Ne'er fear that she will frown, So let her have her way!

However ill-advised and open to censure may have been the late attempt of Mazzini to excite insurrection in Milan, there can be but one feeling in this country in regard to the excessive cruelty of the retribution. Our foreign news this morning sets forth a course of procedure by the imperial authorities which, though not unusual among the barbarie principalities of the East, it is hard to realize is possible in any part of Christendom. There is no proof whatever that more than two or three hundred persons were concerned in the late abortive effort. The proclamations of Marshal Radetzky himself speaks of the movement as the work of but a contemptible revolutionary squad. And yet the whole city was at once put in a most rigorous state of seige; the gates were shut, and all intercourse with the surrounding country was utterly precluded; a most onerous weekly contribution was laid upon the city for the support of the imperial troops; about a score of persons were summarily executed by court martial; the bastinado, it is said, was applied to the backs of women; every fourth house was required to be illuminated; patrols everywhere walked the streets with fixed bayonets; all the principal houses of the nobility were occupied by the military; it was forbidden to whistle in the streets or walk near the ramparts from six o'clock in the evening until seven o'clock in the morning a strict watch was kept all around the city to prevent approach to its walls after a certain hour; sentinels were ordered to fire upon every person coming within thirty yards of them; fifteen thousand natives of a Swiss Canton have been summarily driven from their homes; and now a decree has been issued confiscating the property of the political emigrants from the Lombardo-Venitian Kingdom, comprising many of the most moderate and respectable families in northern Italy, as completely unconnected with the late attempt of Mazzini as any Italian in our own country.

This sequestration applies to both the movable and the immovable property of all, whether they had obtained permission to emigrate or not. By this dscree, property to the amount of three hundred millions of francs is taken from its lawful owners, and hundreds of the most honorable families are reduced to absolute beggary. Duke Litta, a young man of the noblest qualities, a voluntary exile, who some time since, we believe, took service in the Sardinian army, and yet had been on good terms with the Austrian government, and a most strenuous opponent of Mazzini and his schemes, has been despoiled by this measure of an income of half a million of franes. These barbarous decrees are opposed to every principle of equity and international justice, and find their only precedent in the wholesale confiscations of the first French revolution.

It is difficult to see how the fate of Lombardy can be aggravated. Austria seems bent upon crushing every possible germ of conciliation, and reducing all the former relations of the two countries to the simple one of master and slave. An English philosopher, no less a man than Lord Bacon, once wisely said that "the best way to remove seditions is to take away the cause of them," but this kind of lore seems to be too deep for the modern Austrian. He prefers the tactics of the Graben and the Bastei, But the end is not yet; for it is not in human nature thus to be kept forever down by a sword at the throat.—New York Courier and Eng.

THE DOG DANCE AMONG THE SENECA AND SHAWNEE INDIANS.-W. J. J. Morrow, Esq., the agent for the Senecas and Shawnees, in his annual report to Colonel Drennen, Superintendent of Indian affairs in this city, last October, relates the following description of the national festival among those Indians, called the "Dog Dance." He says it comes off the first full moon in each year, and continues about one week. At this dance they sacrifice a white dog. He is gaudily dressed with different colored ribbons, and hung by the neck to a gallows erected for that purpose. He remains in this situation for three days; he is then taken down and burned, and his ashes scattered to the four winds. They imagine that he goes to the spirit country, and is commissioned by them to bear such news as they wish to communicate to their deceased friends and relatives. The ceremony is conducted with great solemnity, and all appear to be deeply impressed with it. - Van Buren (Ark.) Intelligencer, Murch

SAFETY FROM FRIGHTENED HORSES .- Newell's new safety whipple-tree is a very good thing, but the mode adopted in Moscow and St. Petersburg is better, because by it there is no necessity that the horse should clear the carriage and run away, to his own injury and perhaps the loss of life to some poor pedestrian he runs over, to secure the safety of his drivers. It is this:

Around the horse's neck, near the neck-strap, is placed a cord with arunning knot. To this slipnoose is attached a pair of reins, on gentlemen's horses generally of silk cord about the size of a pipe stem, which always lie thrown over the dashboard, ready to be seized at once. When a horse starts and becomes unruly, the gentleman takes up this cord and tightens the horse's throat so that he cannot breathe. The most furious horse stops almost instantly, but he will not fall or kick. I have seen many such reins upon high-spirited horses even in common city dhroskies .- Boston Transcript.

MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 4, 1853.

MR. SLIDELL THE MINISTER TO CENTRAL AMERICA.

In an article upon the subject of this gentleman's appointment to fill the Central American mission, the New York Herald says that he is a native of New York, and is now between fifty-five and sixty years of age. His father was, for a considerable time, President of the Mechanic's Bank of New York City; and the son, for some years, was notary and lawyer for the Union Bank of that city, prior to his departure to try his fortunes in Louisiana. His first prominent advance in that State was his election to Congress, in 1843. At the expiration of his term he was appointed by President Polk as Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary to Mexico. But the annexation of Texas, and the assumption by our government of the boundary of the Rio Grande, had created a most serious difficulty with the government of Mexico. With that difficulty pending, they would not receive Mr. Slidell as full minister, but were willing to admit him in the character of a special envoy, to settle the paramount misunderstanding. Upon this point of diplomatic etiquette hinged the question of peace or war. Mr. Slidell returned home-the war followed, and all its astonishing and most extraordinary results. Mr. Slidell returned to Louisiana, and has subsequently taken an active part in the politics of the State, as a member of the Union branch of the democratic party. He has, however, been defeated as a candidate for the United States Senate, in one or two instances, from a want of harmony with the State rights faction.

The Murfreesboro' Telegraph states that Charles Ready, Esq., of that place, has consented to be a candidate, provided the nomination falls upon him.

The New York Day Book says a very singular funeral took place on Saturday, the 18th inst,, in that city. MR. THACKERAY'S TOUR ENDED. -At the close of his course of lectures at Savannah, Ga., Mr. Thackeray made a briefaddress to the audience. Among other things he spoke of the kindness with which he had everywhere been greeted in the United States, and said he should not cease to remember or to appreciate it when far away in England. We were brethren by language and descent, and were equally entitled to share the rich legacy of literature and science bequeathed to posterity by the great men of whom his lectures treated, and their contemporaries. From this point he should retrace his steps towards the North and thence to England, carrying with him the hope that he would be remembered with the same kindness that he should ever cherish for those whom he had met in this country. These remarks were received with much with the indifference which it deserves, the absurd favor, and the lecturer was warmly cheered upon their conclusion.

ACCIDENTAL DISCOVERY .- During the last season, Mr. Joseph Wilcox, of this town, having occason to administer lime water to a sick horse, inadvertently left a pail of the preparation in his barn, which remained there for some months, serving as a favorite drink for his hens. He soon afterwards found that the laying of his hens was apparently increased to a considerable extent. Being convinced of the importance of the (to him) new discovery, he has, during the present season, kept his hens constantly supplied with lime water, placed in troughs, within SINGULAR CIRCUMSTANCE. - Yesterday, a box | their convenient reach, and the result was an inform, for the same purpose, having been previously understood by many .- Wayne Sentinel.

The decision of the court was that it was not a bailable case, and that the prisoner be committed to jail to await his trial at the Criminal Court in May. On Thursday morning the prisoner came before Judge Davidson by a writ of habeas corpus, and was allowed to give bail for appearance on the second Monday in May in the sum of twelve thousand dollars, which he did. We forbear any comment on the case.

BANK OF EAST TENNESSEE.-The failure of Mr. Chittenden, the principal stockholder renders the failure of this Bank, if not certain, at least highly probable. She has during the last few days redeemed a large amount of her paper, in gold and silver, and will doubtless continue to do so as long as specie remains in her vaults with which to redeem. Holders of her notes would do well to present them promptly .- Knowville Register, March 30.

ANOTHER SPANISH OUTRAGE ON THE AMERICAN FLAG.

We see, by our New York exchanges, that another gross outrage has been committed upon our flag by a Spanish cruiser, near the coast of Cuba .-The vessel upon which this outrage was committed is the schooner Manchester, of Baltimore. Her commander has furnished the Herald with the following account of the occurrence:

is authenticated by his assignees, he was peacefully pursuing his course homeward from Jamaica, about twenty miles east of Cape Antonio, he was boarded by twelve armed men, under the command of a negro second lieutenant, from a Spanish cruiser of twelve guns, who took possession of the ressel in spite of his remonstrances, and carried her. inside the reef there. They then demanded the schooner's papers, which the captain had to take on board the cruiser for examination. The Spanish the letters of the consignees, but desisted when Capt. S. insisted upon his returning them intact.— creduality. If, by chance, any of the readers of the They also broke open the hatches, and took out Monthly Magazine should be disposed to avow beabout a third of the schooner's cargo; but not findg any amunition or guns on board, put it back again. This was done after the paper had been examined and found correct. After detaining her twenty-four hours, anchored close under their guns, the schooner was allowed to proceed, and get out of the reef the best way she could. This, however, letter such use as you may judge proper, and to was not allowed, until Capt. S. had promised to satisfy a demand of thirty dollars for safely piloting him into the reef. The only excuse given for this wanton injustice, was their suspicion of her being bound to Cuba with arms for the revolutionists. The boarding officer gratuitously informed Capt. Sterling that it was utterly impossible, owing to the strict guard kept, for any one to attempt to surreptitionsly land upon the Cuban coast, and that any one caught in the attempt would immediately have a rope around his neck," a hint of whatprobably might have been the fate of Capt. S. if any articles they could have construed into "arms" of 'ammunition" had been found on board.

The Herald very justly remarks upon this shameful occurrence: "In justice to our name and character as a nation, it is necessary that such outrages should be immediately checked. If immediate notice is not taken of this at Washington, very serious trouble will possibly ensue, as the Spanish authorities have a fleet of twelve men-of-war continually cruising around Caba, to intercept real or pretended supplies for the malcontents on the island, the commanders of which will gladly seize hold of the slightest shadow of suspicion as an excuse to molest every American vessel they may fall in with, to gratify their combined fear and hatred of the Amer-

[FROM THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.] THE BOURBON OUESTION.-LETTER FROM THE PRINCE DE JOINVILLE. Further evidence sustaining the claims of Eleasier Williams.

Putnam's Monthly for April is published to-day. Of its dozen papers, each of them highly interesting, the public attention will be mainly directed to a other, during the next year. nd article by the Rev. J. H. Hanson, in support of the claim which he preferred in the February number on behalf of the Rev. Eleazar Williams. that he was the identical Dauphin, son of Louis XVI, hitherto generally supposed to have died in

The present article is in form a review of the work just published in Paris-entitled, "Louis XVII.: his Life, his suffering, his Death-the Captivity of the Royal Family in the Temple; the work enriched with Autographs, Portraits and Plans, by | peared in it, Mr Hubbard. M. A. Beauchesne," a condensed summary of which has just been published by the Harpers, and which has been very widely cited as establishing beyond all possibility of further doubt, the fact of the Dauphin's death. Mr. Hanson examines its successive statements with decided critical ability, and reaches the distinct conclusion that the book rather confirms, than dissipated the doubts that have hitherto existed upon this point, and that, in spite of the confidence with which it has been quoted in proof of the Dauphin's death, it does not even weaken the positive testimony to the fact that he was removed from the Temple, and another child resembling him left in his place. But with this part of the article we are not now especially

It will be remembered that in the first article upon this subject, Mr. Hanson embodied a statement made by Mr. Williams himself, that in October, 1841, while at Mackinac, Capt. John Shook said to him that Prince de Joinville, who was then there, had inquired after him and wished to see him; that both embarked on board the steamboat for Chicago; that the Prince sought and obtained an introduction to him, and on first seeing him appeared to be greatly affected and surprised; that they had a conversation of several hours together upon various points in American and French history; that on reaching Green Bay the Prince desired him to take up his quarters with him at the same hotel, to which he assented; that in the evening the Prince, enjoining secrecy, told him that he was the son of Louis XVI., the vertible Dauphin who was supposed to have died in the Templeplaced before him a document, engrossed on parchment and sealed in due form, abdicting the throne of France in favor of Louis Phillippe, and requested him to sign it, offering as an inducement a princely establishment, either in this country or in France, and that he refused to sign it, upon which a warm altercation ensued between him and the Prince. though they parted as friends.

This direct assertion upon so material a point in the whole case, was brought to the attention of Prince de Joinville by the London agent of the Mayazine, to whom, in reply, the Prince wrote the following letter.

CLARMONT, Surrey, Feb. 9, 1853. Suc-"The Prince de Joinville has received the number of the Monthly Magazine of New York, which you have kindly thought fit to transmit to him, and has read the article to which you have called his attention. His first thought was, to treat invention on which this article is founded-but on reflecting that a little truth is there mixed with much falsehood, the Prince has deemed it right that I should in his name, give a few lines in reply, to show the exact portion of truth there is in this mass

"You can make, Sir, of this reply, the use which you think proper.

"It is very true, that in a voyage which he made to the United States, towards the end of the year 1841, the Prince finding himself at Mackinac, met on board the steamboat, a passenger whose face he thinks he recognizes, in the portrait given in the Monthly Magazine, but whose name had entirely escaped his memory. "This passenger seemed well informed concerncentury. He related many anecdotes and interesting particulars concerning the French who took part, and distinguished themselves in these events. His mother, he said, was an Indian woman of the great tribe of the Iroquois, faithful allies of France. He added that, on his father's side, his origin was French, and went so far as to cite a name which the Prince abstains from repeating. It was by this means that he had come in possession of so many details curious to hear. One of the most interesting of these recitals was that which he gave of the last moments of the Marquis of Montcalm, who died in the arms of an Iroquois, who was his relative, and to whom the great captain had left his sword. These details could not fail vividly to interest the Prince, whose voyage to Mackinac, Green Bay, and the Upper Mississippi, had for its object to retrace the glorious patch of the French, who had first opened to civilization these fine countries. The Prince asked Mr. Williams, since such was the name of his interlocutor, to send to him, in the form of notes, all the information which he could procure, and which could throw light upon the history of French establishments in North America. On his side, Mr. Williams, who did not appear less curious to understand thoroughly this same history, asked the Prince to transmit to him all the documents which related to it, and which could be found in the archives of the French Gov-

"On his arrival at Green Bay, the Prince was detained during half a day, by the difficulty of pro-caring the number of horses necessary for the journey, which he was about to undertake. Mr. Williams pressed him earnestly to accompany him to a settlement of Iroquois Indians, established near Green Bay, among whom, he said, were still many who remembered their Eastern fathers, and who would receive with delight the son of the Great Chief of France. The Prince declined this offer and pursued his journey.

"Since then, some letters have been exchanged between Mr. Williams and the persons attached to "According to Captain Sterling's account, which the Prince, on the subject of the documents in question. Thus the letter of M. Touchard, cited in the article of the Monthly Magazine, must be authentic. hen, on the 15th inst., off the island of Cuba, and Mr. Williams could also equally have produced one which I remember to have written to him upon the same subject.

"But there ends all which the article contains of truth, concerning the relations of the Prince with Mr. Williams. All the rest, all which treats of the revolution which the Prince made to Mr. Williams, of the mystery of his birth, all which concerns the pretended personage of Louis XVII, is, from one ommander was even going so far as to break open end to the other, a work of the imagination; a fable woven wholesale; a speculation upon the public lief in it, they should procure from Paris a book which has been very recently published by M. Beauchense. They will there find concerning the life and death of the unfortunate Dauphin, the most circumstantial and positive details. It remains for me to repeat to you, Sir, that you can make of this offer to you at the same time, the assurance of my distinguished consideration.

The Senate have had under consideration a treaty with Great Britain providing that citizens of the United States be allowed to hold real estate in Great Britain, and that British subjects have the like privilege here. The assent of the British Government to this treaty is another proof of the liberal disposition of that government towards the United States. It is not probable that our land speculations will, at present, extend to Great Britain-prices being high and on the rise everywhere thereabouts, and especially in Ireland, where some of our people might be disposed to make investments in view of the ultimate esults of the policy of Young America. But it is very important to us to encourage the investments of British capital in this country.

It is known that a few British capitalists now wish, immediately, to purchase, to the extent of six millions of pounds sterling, copper lands in the Lake Superior region. How much capital they may invest in other mineral lands, and in our banks and railroads, is not to be named. But it is believed that the whole Australian flood of gold will be poured into this country in one way of investment or an-

The Memoirs of the Mother and Queens of Henry VIII, contained in this volume, comprehending the period from 1465 to 1548, present so striking a picture of the stormy era of transition from the middle ages to modern times, that they may be regarded as forming a ground by themselves, and little, if anything, is lost by detaching them from Miss Strickland's "Lives of the Queens of England," of which they form so interesting a portion. The Publishers, therefore, deem it necessary only to say that they have suffered no mutilation or abridgement.
